

ABSTRACT

A system and a method for providing a high-speed communications network transparently over an existing electrical network of a building are provided. A host unit and one or more subscriber units are each coupled to the electrical network of the building. In particular, the host unit is plugged into a electrical socket of the electrical network of the building. The host unit is coupled to a communications network. The subscriber unit is in communications with communications network via the electrical network.

1.036661 - 07896360